An Introduction to Behavioral Endocrinology

5th Edition

R. Nelson, Ohio State Univ 4084 Graves Hall, Columbus, OH; L. J. Kriegsfeld, Helen Wills NeuroSci, Berkeley, CA

About the book

An Introduction to Behavioral Endocrinology, Fifth Edition retains all of the features of the bestselling prior editions, and provides an updated, integrated presentation of the study of hormone–behavior–brain interactions. Continuing to emphasize a comparative approach, the text explores the endocrine mechanisms that have evolved in both human and nonhuman animals to solve common problems in survival and reproduction. The Fifth Edition benefits by the addition of a new coauthor, Lance Kriegsfeld (The University of California, Berkeley), who brings additional expertise and teaching experience in behavioral endocrinology. An Introduction to Behavioral Endocrinology, Fifth Edition is appropriate for upper-level undergraduate and graduate courses in psychology, biology, anthropology, or zoology. It contains several important pedagogical features: Learning objectives (new to this edition) are set out at the beginning of each chapter. Key terms are defined in the margins throughout the text. The text is richly illustrated with color photographs and drawings. Chapter-end summaries restate important points. Discussion questions and suggested further readings are also included in each chapter. The text contains nearly 2,400 references to the literature in behavioral endocrinology. As with previous editions, the book is accompanied by animations, video, sound files, and graphics—accessible via the Companion Website—to aid in understanding the material in the text

- Fills a niche that few other books cover
- Updated to keep abreast of changes in the field
- Text is accessible and readable
- Accompanying by a full range of video, graphics, sound files and animations

Discovering GIS and ArcGIS

2nd Edition

B. A. Shellito,

About the book

An application based approach to introductory and advanced GIS

Each chapter focuses on using a variety of ArcGIS tools in a real-world context. At the start of each chapter, a scenario puts the student in a particular role with a number of tasks to accomplish. These scenarios include the role of a park ranger trying to find the best overland route to rescue a group of stranded hikers (Chapter 19), a delivery person finding the shortest driving route between a set of libraries (Chapter 11), and an urban planner trying to determine the minimum height necessary for constructing an observation platform (Chapter 15).

Because the early chapters teach basic GIS and ArcGIS skills using data that can be easily replicated for a local area, the scenarios used are simple. The scenarios used in later chapters become more specific (as the book assumes that students have mastered the basic skills and can work with more difficult or involved tasks). In addition, each chapter describes professions and applications in the real world that make use of the chapter's theory and skills.

- The Ability to Localize Each Chapter with Freely Available Data. Some students may respond better to working with GIS applications if they get to work with local data. For instance, being able to geocode the locations of nearby libraries or determine the sites for an ecological preserve within their own county may better connect students to these tasks.
- Smartboxes, Troubleboxes, and Questions. The bulk of each chapter consists of hands-on use of ArcGIS to complete the tasks involved with the chapter's scenario. Important key terms are highlighted in maroon.
- Related Concepts for Each Chapter. There are many topics in GIS—more than can be covered in a single chapter without making that chapter seem like a very contrived cookbook. The Related Concepts section at the end of each chapter presents important information about related topics that weren't covered in the chapter.
- Go Pro! for Each Chapter. For each chapter, this feature provides information on how to work with the concepts of that chapter in ArcGIS Pro.

Child-Centred Practice

A Handbook for Social Work

T. Race, Leeds Beckett University Faculty of Health, Leeds, UK; R. O'Keefe, Leeds, UK

About the book

Since the Munro report (2011), a greater emphasis has been placed on the value of child-centred practice in social work with children, young people and families. It has come to be recognised that social workers cannot make an assessment or intervene to safeguard children and promote positive outcomes without engaging with the children themselves. This involves recognising the rights of the child, getting to know who they are, what they need, how they feel about their situation, and what they want for their future. Split into two distinct sections, this authoritative text focuses on the foundational knowledge required for child-centred work, unpacking the ethical and theoretical principles that form the basis of the approach and exploring current debates around working with children and families. Benefitting from the authors' extensive experience in academia and practice settings, each chapter: provides insightful practitioner testimonials and case study examples to help the reader apply what they have learned to everyday practice highlights important research studies that give voice to children and young people, providing the reader with background knowledge of the evidence base for child-centred approaches includes engaging questions and activities to enable the reader to reflect on what they have learned, and make links to their own practice, values and beliefs. With a strong focus on developing the reader's practice skills, particularly in engaging and communicating with children, Child-Centred Practice is an essential handbook for students and professionals involved in this complex yet rewarding area of social work practice.

- Working with children is a popular role for social workers to specialise in
- The only book of its kind to embed the voices of current practitioners and the perspectives of service users in the text
- Its rights based approach is both timely and unique

In Therapy Together

Family Therapy as a Dialogue

P. Rober, University of Leuven Inst for Family & Sexuality Studies, Kortenberg

About the book

Families come in all shapes and sizes, and most have love at their roots; however, by the time a family requests help from a psychotherapist, resentment, fear and disappointment have often become the dominant forces ruling everyday life. Moving away from the medically-focused 'problem-diagnosis-treatment' model of psychotherapy, Peter Rober's thought-provoking new text conceptualises family therapy as a dialogue between living, breathing people; it emphasises the mutuality and relational context that serves as the backdrop of a therapeutic encounter, whereby family members will interact, emotions will be displayed and suppressed, and practitioners will need to navigate carefully, endeavouring not just to listen but to understand the stories being told. Astute and engaging throughout, each chapter provides close analysis of a rich variety of case studies, combined with an examination of key theories and concepts – including the different schools of narrative-oriented therapies, and how they can be applied in everyday practice situations. Written by a leading expert in the field, this insightful new addition to Palgrave's Basic Texts in Counselling and Psychotherapy series provides an accessible exploration of a complex area of practice. It will prove invaluable reading for those studying family therapy specifically, as well as students taking more general counselling and psychotherapy courses and practitioners looking for a fresh source of guidance.

- A growing area of interest with a large practitioner market

- Few up to date comparable books available
